Extra Credit Challenge
Types of Phrases

In this week's posting, there are fifteen phrases or individual words underlined and in a different color font. Some of these are prepositional phrases, one is an appositive and the others are participles, participial phrases, gerunds, or gerund phrases.

For extra credit, you are to identify the underlined elements. If the element is a prepositional phrase, you must also indicate whether it is being used as an adjective phrase or an adverb phrase.

These are listed below for you, so you can just print this sheet out and fill in the identification, or you can copy them onto loose-leaf paper and put your answers next to them.

You may, of course, use your grammar book, but the work must be your own. If you wish to receive credit, you need to turn in your answers to me before homeroom period on Monday.
